Be Steadfast

Three Ways for Kids to end the School Year Strong

For most of us, where ever you may live, be it United States or Mexico, there's only about a month of school left. And many will probably consider summer session as a safe heaven just to ease the painful thought of trying to finish on time this school year.

These final days can be crazy busy! RIGHT? There are Class Days, small group tutor lead classes, sport events, and fun school-wide celebrations ahead. The whole winding down process provides many distractions to kids, and plenty of opportunity to slack off.

Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless.
2 PETER 3:14

However, it's important to encourage your kids to end the school year strong.

Take it from a teacher's/ mom perspective-there is still much to be accomplished in those last 30 days.

Many of our small group classes or teacher lead mandatory classes are following a timeline to introduce learning standards or are finishing up end-of-year testing to measure academic growth in various subjects.

Diligent

How can you keep your child on track? Here are three ideas.

1. Maintain your routine

Even though the weather is warming, and the grill and pool are calling your name, resist the temptation to stay up late playing outdoors. Instead, stick to your routines. They provide a predictability that help children feel safe. The same morning routine sets a calm start. Keeping homework time protected lends the child confidence. And going to bed at a consistent time will prevent exhaustion.

2. Keep a calendar

Visuals often help reduce children's stress. You can jot down upcoming fun events, like a field day, carnival, or field trip. Likewise note known testing dates and major homework assignment due dates. The night before, set goals for the next day so your child has a clear understanding of your expectations and their responsibilities.

As well at home with your personal work, if your child loses focus, he may miss important information or score lower than his potential on any of these assessments.

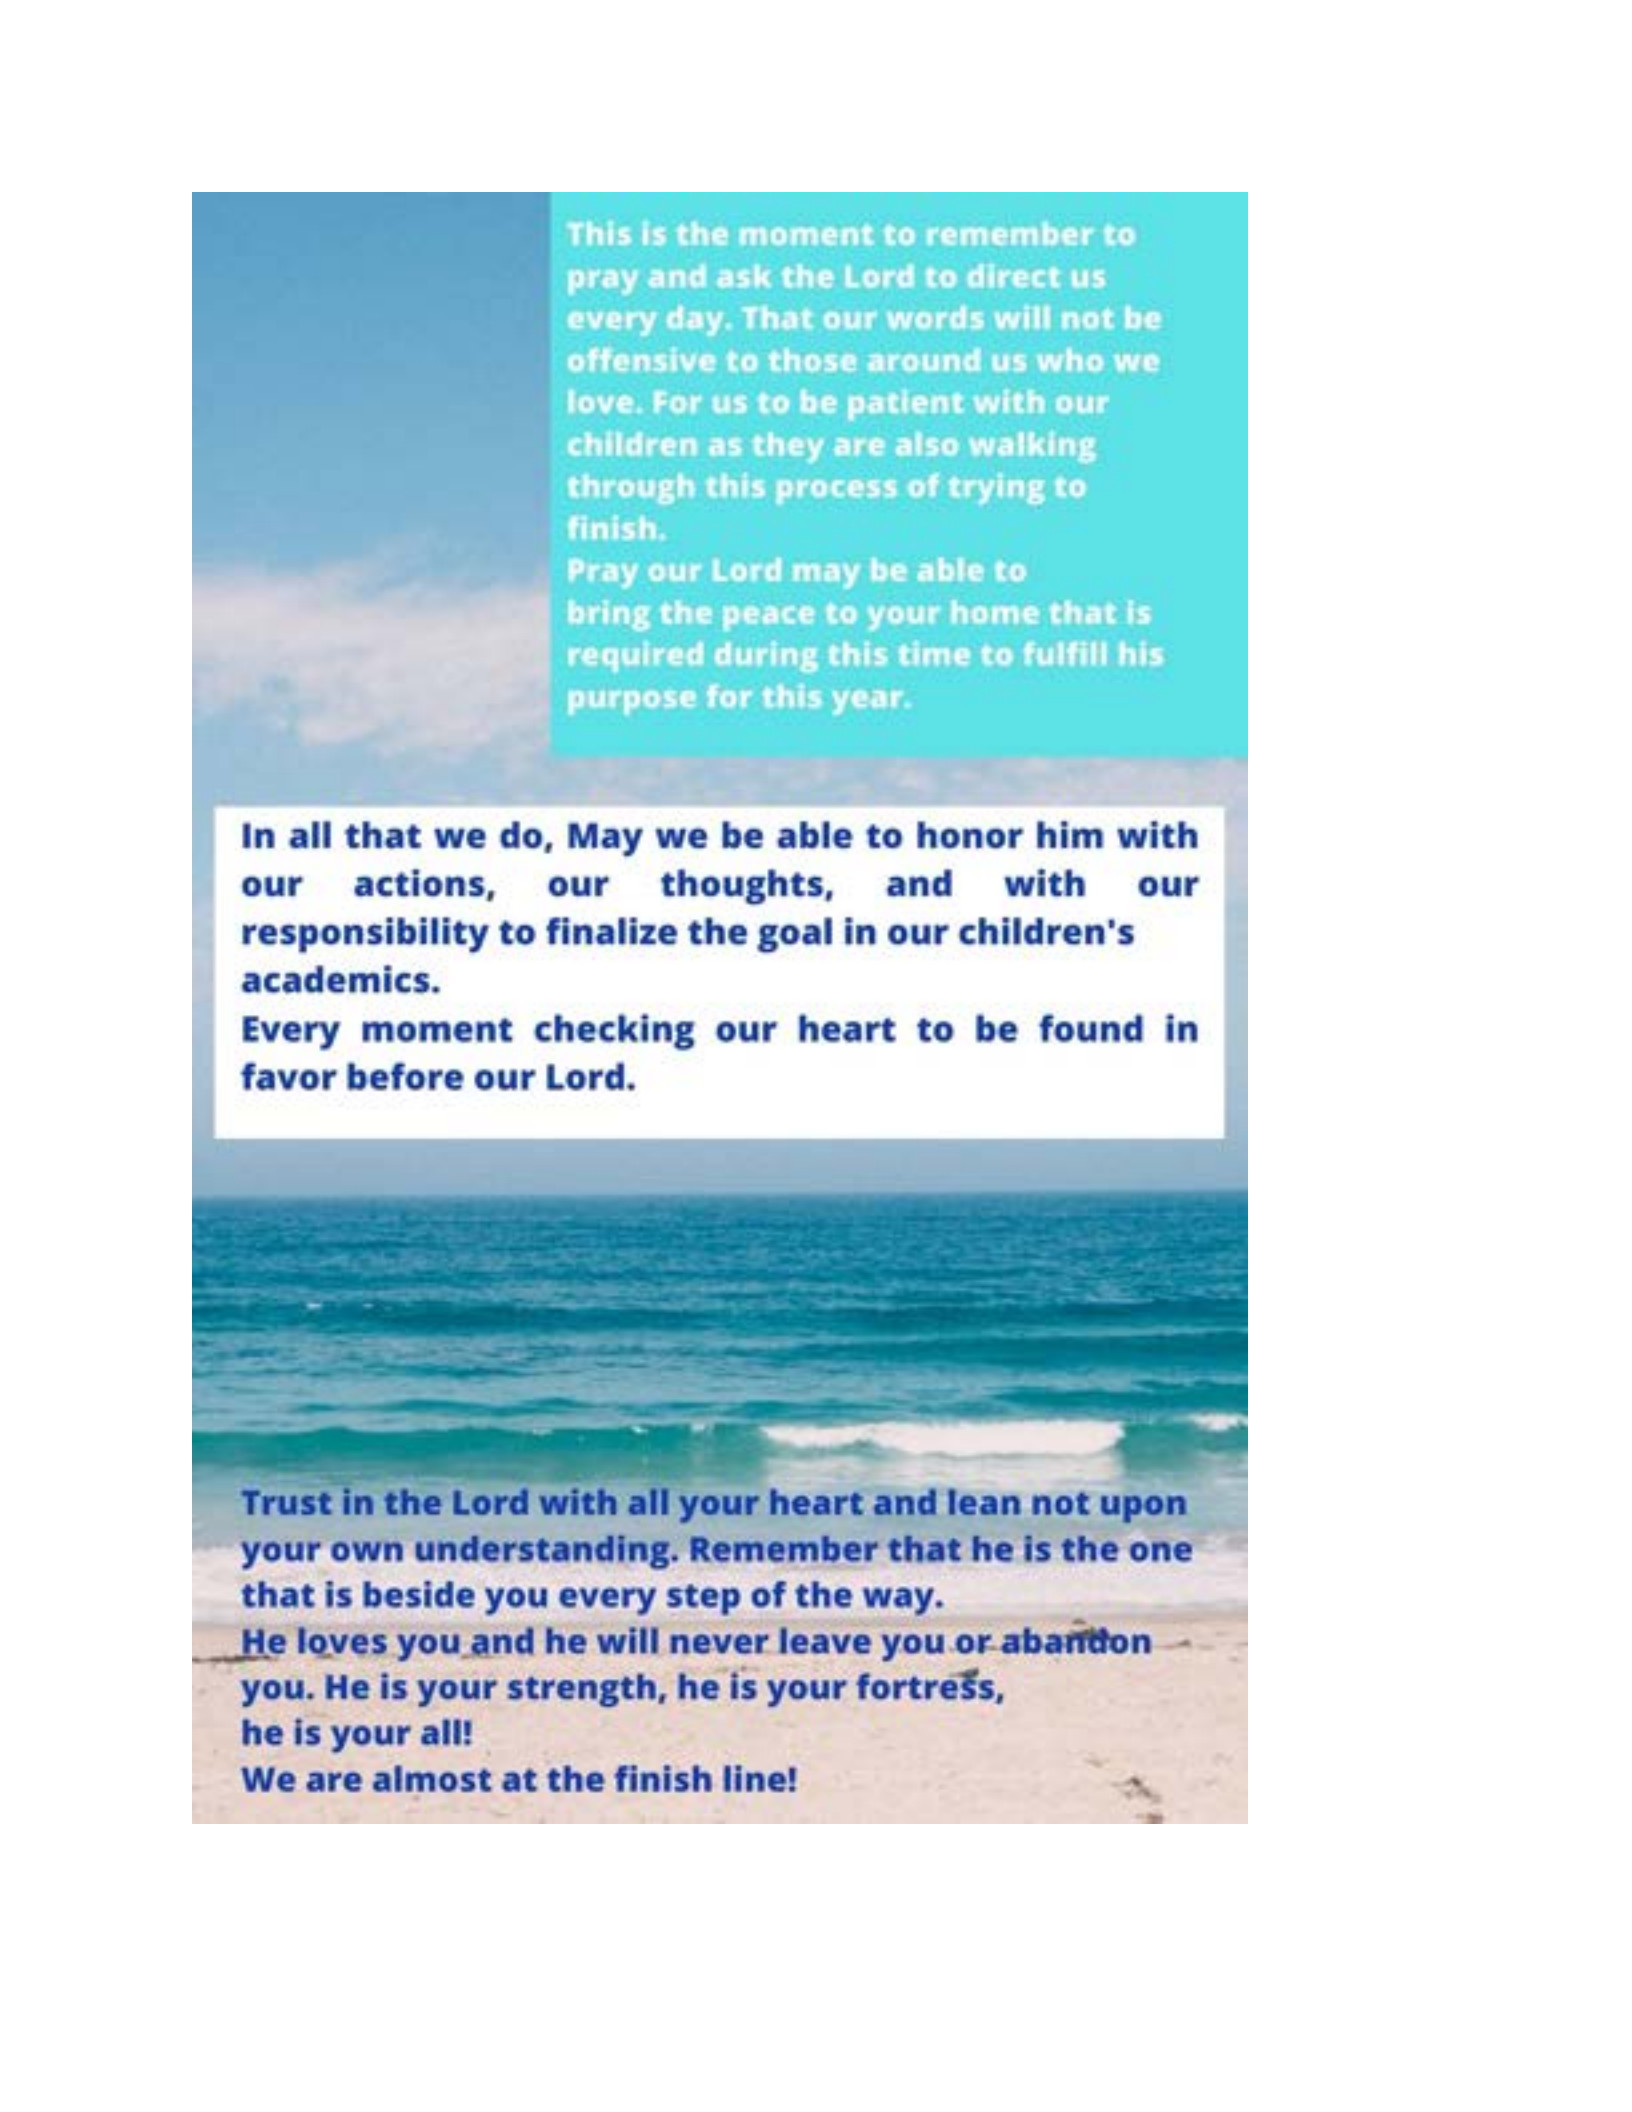

3. Emphasize the importance of doing your best

Sometimes, kids get the Im-almost-done bug and rush through their work at the end of the school year. You can encourage them to avoid making careless mistakes by attaching a checklist they can reference to a folder or other visible supply. Add things like, my name is on my paper, I showed my thinking, I re-read each question, I used my best handwriting. If desired, celebrate each box they checked off when they return home.

4. Trust your Lord and ask for his direction

Sometimes, We can also lose perspective of where we're at within so much that is needed to do at the end of the school year. Many of us are also tired and feel Overwhelmed when we see pages that probably have not been finished and we see the days check list nearing the final date. So much grading, correcting of work, writing assignments and oh so much stress!

This is the moment to remember to pray and ask the Lord to direct us every day. That our words will not be offensive to those around us who we love. For us to be patient with our children as they are also walking through this process of trying to finish.

Pray our Lord may be able to bring the peace to your home that is required during this time to fulfill his purpose for this year.

In all that we do, May we be able to honor him with our actions, our thoughts, and with our responsibility to finalize the goal in our children's academics.

Every moment checking our heart to be found in favor before our Lord.

Trust in the Lord with all your heart and lean not upon your own understanding. Remember that he is the one that is beside you every step of the way.

He loves you and he will never leave you or abandon you. He is your strength, he is your fortress, he is your all!

We are almost at the finish line!

Words of encouragement to our High schoolers.

We're in the final stretch.

For some students, this will be the last few weeks they spend in school.

Some might graduate high school and go on to other avenues of life, some are graduating college and preparing for the rest of their lives.

Many of you will be getting ready to do it all over again in the fall.

So, this is a letter of encouragement to students during these last few weeks of school. It's almost over, and all the hard work you've done this semester is going to pay off. All those hours writing papers and solving equations will disappear for a few months, and you will come away knowing so much more than you did at the beginning of the year.

This is the time when teachers and professors really crack down on the homework, projects and tests. This is where things get tough because it seems like so much is due at once. It seems like everyone is trying to put immense pressure on you and trying to make you crack under it. It's a difficult feeling to get through, and it takes a lot to get through the last part of the academic school year.

To the students who have been struggling to find the motivation to do homework and study and go to school every day, you have my respect.

You've all worked so hard, so don't let anyone tell you otherwise. I'm proud of you for making it this far, putting in hours of work and trying your best. Never forget that your best is all you can give.

Especially during these last few weeks, and for the years to come, don't over-exert yourself. You need to take time to rest, drink some water, even to just breathe. I won't say one bad grade isn't the end of the world because for some, it could mean so much. But I will say your health, physically and mentally, is more important than any grade. Work hard and stick with it, but take care of yourself, as well. Stay hydrated, get plenty of sleep, go see your friends. Don't stare at a book or a screen for hours on end. Remember, it's OK to breathe.

Stay strong because it's almost over. The time to relax and take a day off will soon be upon us. Just look forward to what's to come, and hang in there just a little bit longer. School, work, relationships - none of these are easy, but they're usually worth it. Keep your head straight and your mind and body strong and continue to work hard. But, remember, it's also good to make sure you're not overdoing it, either.

As expressed to your parents, ALWAYS Trust in the Lord with all your heart and lean not upon your own understanding. Remember that he is the one that is beside you every step of the way. He loves you and he will never leave you or abandon you. He is your strength, he is your fortress, he is your all!

We love you and we're very proud of you!

Congratulations!

PRAAYER REQUEST

and Praise

1.- Please pray for HEALTH for our following families: Alvarado family, Schultz family, McFarland family, Alatraste family and Beltran family.

2.- Please pray for our two BCA ceremony Graduations. May our Lord prepare the hearts of our guests to hear the message of Salvation. For our students who fly high, May our Lord guide them and prosper their lives. For our parents who start a new season in their lives.

2.- We ask for prayer for our ministry, our BCA school, and our families. May our Lord grant us many more years to serve families in the United States, Mexico and Central America. (Protection for our school) May we be in position for many years to come to guard more generations of children from rapid legislations and government policies overtaking parental rights which are limiting our liberty and free choice of Christian Education.

3.-Provision for tuition and financial help for our needed families. (Widows, low income families and orphanages) A monetary provision to come from heaven for the very needed curricula for our students.

Please pray, pray, pray!

4.- We praise our Lord for giving us this school year where we have seen his steadfast hand in guidance and spiritual growth. We praise him for our families and the miracles that God has done in each home. He is a wonderful God!

To him be all the glory!

5.- We praise God that today new generations rise to his calling. Women and men of God who God will use in these times. We praise God for the hearts that he has changed towards his!

6.- We praise the Lord for one more year that he has given us to finalize our school year. For our BCA graduation and students who fly high this year to a new horizon. Thank you Lord for these young Students!

We thank God every day, for he is a good God!
